

CRIME in 2003 January through December

This report compares preliminary crime counts for January through December 2003 with final counts for the same period in 2002 for California law enforcement jurisdictions serving populations of 100,000 or more. The 79 jurisdictions which met this criterion in 2002 and 2003 account for approximately 65 percent of the crimes reported in the state.

Law enforcement jurisdictions are grouped into three categories:

- Police departments (provide law enforcement services to cities).
- Sheriff's departments (provide law enforcement services to unincorporated areas<sup>1</sup> within counties).
- Contract cities (cities that contract for law enforcement services, usually with a sheriff's department, rather than maintain their own police force).

The 2003 crime data used in this report are preliminary and are subject to change. It should also be noted that crime rates are not used in this report but are included in the annual Crime in California publication.

Facts at a Glance

The VIOLENT CRIME category includes the offenses of homicide, forcible rape, robbery, and aggravated assault.

From January through December 2003, the number of violent crimes decreased 3.1 percent when compared to the same period in 2002. All four violent offense categories decreased from 2002 during this period.

The PROPERTY CRIME category includes the offenses of burglary, motor vehicle theft, and larceny-theft over $400.

From January through December 2003, the number of property crimes increased 2.8 percent when compared to the same period in 2002. All three property offense categories increased from 2002 during this period.

Use of the California Crime Index (CCI) has been temporarily suspended until a new national crime index is established by the FBI.
