

Mission

The JDIS Bureau's mission is to provide reliable data and investigative services to our criminal justice partners and public policy stakeholders to support their efforts in protecting Californians.

Comprised of two branches, the Justice Data & Auditing and Investigative Services Branch, the bureau offers investigative and field service functions to criminal justice and public safety partners, regulatory agencies, and the people of California. Information and technical assistance are provided for a variety of statewide databases. Together, the branches manage key program functions that include:

- Client Services – data sharing services, training and audits, and support multiple systems, such as the Racial Identity Profiling Act (RIPA), Stop Data Collection System
- Controlled Substance Utilization Review and Evaluation System (CURES) – the state's Prescription Drug Monitoring Program (PDMP)
- Criminal Justice Statistics Center (CJSC)
- Law Enforcement Support – 24/7 Command Center, database supports "hot files" - supervised release, restraining and protective orders, pawnbroker, stolen vehicles, automated property, wanted persons
- Violent Crime Information Center – California Sex and Arson Registry, Megan's Law Website, Missing and Unidentified Persons, Investigative Support

The JDIS Bureau supports the overall mission of California Department of Justice by:

Improving decision-making: Reliable statewide data helps the DOJ report crime trends and develop effective public safety strategies.

Strengthening investigations: Databases, registries, and investigative support provide law enforcement with critical information.

Enhancing public safety: Resources like the Megan's Law website and Missing Persons website provide tools for the public.

Supporting collaboration: Data sharing and training allow local, state, and federal partners to work together more effectively.

Promoting accountability and transparency: Audits and data reporting systems ensure compliance with laws and build public trust.
